

Fair and Accurate Representation

Apply time-honored values to benefit our modern-day community

We are privileged to live in a multigenerational community with people from many ethnicities and religions. With my work as a community volunteer and advocate, I have come to understand and support how our time-honored values apply to and benefit our modern-day population, neighborhoods and challenges.

Our elected officials should be a reflection of our community, not a reflection of the most powerful voices on the Hill.

Serve the community's priorities, not special interests

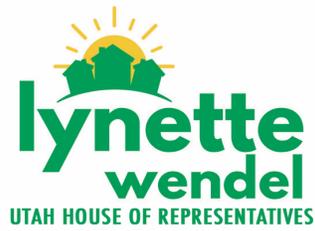

I spend time in our schools, community centers and government meetings creating a direct line of communication with the people in our neighborhoods on a weekly basis. For the past few years, our voters' only recourse has been to invest in expensive and time-consuming ballot initiatives, propositions and referendums trying to have their voices heard. Voters took a stand and were overruled on medical cannabis, Medicaid expansion, independent redistricting and tax reform. It's shameful to be repeatedly undermined by our own Legislature.

Having had the pleasure to give more than 18,000 volunteer hours in our community over the past 15 years, I have personally experienced the divide between our community's priorities and the legislature's policy. I will bring our grassroot voices to the Capitol and eliminate that divide.

Facilitate legislation that prioritizes people over party

My experience in mediation prevents me from choosing teams and requires my focus to be on identifying the problem and facilitating the process that brings us to the most sensible solution. This process must involve all stakeholders involved regardless how oppositional their positions. I am comfortable in uncomfortable conversations and am experienced in promoting civil, productive dialogue. I embrace hard work even in the most difficult environments and I get results.

I am proud to have Republicans, unaffiliated voters, and Democrats on my team. I have volunteers aged 16-84, from many ethnic and religious groups, serving on my campaign committee. This ensures I am informed in the best way possible to serve our community.

I am a moderate running on the Democratic ticket, committed to representing the residents and families of Taylorsville and Kearns above all else. I will always put my neighbors before parties and politics.
